The Training Program in Archeology

sponsored by the

and the

Want to get your hands dirty?

The Arkansas Archeological Society is an organization for people of all ages and occupations who are interested in prehistoric and historic archeology in Arkansas. Active local chapters across the state hold monthly meetings offering speakers, news of current events, and opportunities to help with research and preservation projects. Members enjoy fellowship with others who share a love of history and respect for the heritage of those who made Arkansas their home over the last 10,000 years!

All members receive the Society's two publications: a bimonthly newsletter Field Notes and an annual bulletin The Arkansas Archeologist

The Society maintains a close working relationship with the professional staff of the Arkansas Archeological Survey, who frequently call upon Society members to help with their field and laboratory projects. The Annual Meeting features presentations by professionals and Society members, and a banquet with a keynote speaker.

If archeology intrigues you and you'd like to get your hands dirty - or even if you'd prefer to stay out of the dirt but would like to learn more about Arkansas's past - we invite you to join the Arkansas Archeological Society!

Everyone has a past, so we strive to make our programs inclusive, welcoming and barrier-free. We're committed to making archaeology as diverse as the past we study.

The Training Program in Archeology

The Training Program gives interested members of the Arkansas Archeological Society the chance to get involved in all phases of archeological fieldwork: survey, mapping, excavation, photography, laboratory, and more.

The program takes place each year in June, offering varied experiences at both prehistoric and historic sites throughout the state. The work contributes to scientific research projects that add new information to our knowledge about the archeology of Arkansas.

Requirements

- Participants must be members of the Arkansas Archeological Society with dues paid in full for all family members at the site.
- All participants must attend an orientation before beginning the training.
- Children 17 years and younger must be accompanied by a responsible adult at all times.
- Minimum age is 8 years old.
- Participants must abide by all rules established by the sponsoring organizations and the Camp Boss.
- Registration fees vary, based on location and length of stay for each participant.
- All artifacts and other objects, notes, and other information resulting from the fieldwork are curated by the Arkansas Archeological Survey for the benefit of all the people of Arkansas.

Features

- Archeological field experience at real sites as part of ongoing research programs.
- You may register for any number of days during the two-week session, but you must complete the Beginners' Orientation before beginning work.
- On-site camping or blocks of rooms in nearby motels; accommodations and fees vary depending on available local facilities.
- Field and lab training provided by the professional archeologists of the Arkansas Archeological Survey.
- Beginning and advanced seminars on various topics with classroom and hands-on instruction.
- Optional evening lectures on varied subjects.
